

Lovesick workers bunk off

90 words

3 November 2005

Coventry Evening Telegraph

17

English

(c) 2005 Coventry Newspapers Ltd

HALF of British workers have taken time off to be with their lover, or because they have split up from a partner - accounting for two million lost working days a year - research shows.

The survey of 1,100 adults was carried out by online dating service

www.parship.co.uk

Workers in London took most time off to be with the new love of their life, while people in Scotland were most likely to call in sick when getting over a split from a partner.